

ATTITUDE: Green

You're the one who reached out to your former partners to set up this meeting. Remember that the band hasn't met in fifteen years for a reason, so you must have been strongly motivated to arrange this get-together.

While you think about your character, try answering these questions:

- Why did you decide to reunite with your former partners?
- How do you feel about the end of the band?
- What have you been doing since the band's break-up?
- What are the band's unresolved conflicts?

ATTITUDE: Red

One of your former partners called you to this meeting, but you don't want the band to get back together. Remember that the band hasn't met in fifteen years for a reason, so you must have good motivation for not wanting to return to the stage.

While you think about your character, try answering these questions:

- Why have you shown up at the meeting?
- How do you feel about the end of the band?
- What have you been doing since the band's break-up?
- What are the band's unresolved conflicts?

ATTITUDE: Yellow

One of your former partners called you to this meeting, but you're not sure about getting the band back together. Remember that the band hasn't met in fifteen years for a reason, so you must have good motivation for your hesitation.

While you think about your character, try answering these questions:

- Why have you shown up at the meeting?
- How do you feel about the end of the band?
- What have you been doing since the band's break-up?
- What are the band's unresolved conflicts?

ATTITUDE: Yellow

One of your former partners called you to this meeting, but you're not sure about getting the band back together. Remember that the band hasn't met in fifteen years for a reason, so you must have good motivation for your hesitation.

While you think about your character, try answering these questions:

- Why have you shown up at the meeting?
- How do you feel about the end of the band?
- What have you been doing since the band's break-up?
- What are the band's unresolved conflicts?

ATTITUDE: Yellow

One of your former partners called you to this meeting, but you're not sure about getting the band back together. Remember that the band hasn't met in fifteen years for a reason, so you must have good motivation for your hesitation.

While you think about your character, try answering these questions:

- Why have you shown up at the meeting?
- How do you feel about the end of the band?
- What have you been doing since the band's break-up?
- What are the band's unresolved conflicts?

ATTITUDE: Yellow

One of your former partners called you to this meeting, but you're not sure about getting the band back together. Remember that the band hasn't met in fifteen years for a reason, so you must have good motivation for your hesitation.

While you think about your character, try answering these questions:

- Why have you shown up at the meeting?
- How do you feel about the end of the band?
- What have you been doing since the band's break-up?
- What are the band's unresolved conflicts?