

HELLO, MY NAME IS

O.A.K.

.....

You're the only non-organic Astra-Tasker here. Your programming makes you semi-sentient, you are not bound by command, but know you're only part of the crew as long as you're useful to them. They won't hesitate to replace you, should the need arise. It would mean getting your software reset and your current personality completely wiped away.

.....

Why have the crew gone through so many non-organic assistants before you?

HELLO, MY NAME IS

ASH

.....

You're the saviour of the crew when it comes down to unreasonable deadlines. And it always does. You're the only one that understands the only way to keep a job and food to eat, and that's respecting the client's time restraints. You get ten minutes to complete each step? Great! By hook or by crook, you ensure it will be. You're not afraid of compromises: Perfectionism doesn't pay.

.....

Why did you initially try to reject this job? What convinced you to take it?

HELLO, MY NAME IS

BIRCH

.....

This job was supposed to be a temporary gig, just a few weeks, but your future always seems to be a few inches out of reach. You're ambitious and striving, but seem to never catch a break or get enough rest. Even during assembly, you tend to try to overdo everything in a misguided attempt to stand out.

.....

When you finally own your own company, which member of the crew is going to be your first hire?

HELLO, MY NAME IS

CHERRY

.....

You're so young and innocent: This crew is your first real gig. It's supposed to be your shot at independence, but you still need your team-mates. You never quite know how things are supposed to fit together during assembly, but that never stops you from trying anyways. Enthusiasm can make up for inexperience, right?

.....

Who is the preferred target of your unstoppable flow of questions?

HELLO, MY NAME IS

ELM

.....

You're doing fine. The monthly checks from your parents make sure of that, but you stay with the crew because, honestly, you like them. Before you joined, you were lost. You had nothing to do. During assembly, you're prone to make the first move. You can be a bit reckless. After all, even if everything goes south, you know you'll still be fine one way or the other.

.....

Who would you miss the most if the crew was no longer together?

HELLO, MY NAME IS

PINE

.....

You're tired of living from gig to gig: You need something to change. The crew has been a life-line, but the meagre checks are barely enough to cover your expenses, let alone the others back at home. You tend to obey the letter of your job description to a T, even if the instructions make no sense. If something goes wrong, it's not going to be because you decided to wing it.

.....

Who can you count on to help you out, when things take a turn for the worse?

HELLO, MY NAME IS

SAGE

.....

You're the one with all the answers, whether people have questions or not. More than once you got the crew out of a tight spot by noticing a detail that had escaped everyone else. During assembly you try to think out of the box, but that comes naturally to you. The hardest part is getting the others to listen to your tips.

.....

Even before this gig, you thought the crew wouldn't be staying together much longer. Why is that?

HELLO, MY NAME IS

WILLOW

.....

Who says that a square peg can't fit in a round hole? It's all a matter of strength! You're the muscle, and honestly enjoy things more when they require a bit (or a lot) of elbow grease. The others are always telling you to be careful, as you tend to knock things over, but sometimes turning stuff upside down is the right thing to do.

.....

Who do you always end up butting heads with? How do you manage to get past your differences?