CONVERT

You've changed. Maybe it was the art lab, or the meeting with that priest, but something ignited inside you: Once you hit rock bottom, you chose to climb back up. You won't allow this place to define you, you won't let it convince you that you're alone and defeated. Now you know that liberty is the soul's right to breathe and nobody can take that away from you.

What will you do when you get out?

Do you think someone will dislike your change?

Is there somebody in here who needs the peace you've found?
